NEWS RELEASE

United States Attorney Michael L. Levy announced the filing of an indictment¹ against Rueben Lamar Gober, a/k/a “Lamar Evans,” a/k/a “Umar,” and Anthony Raheem Jackson, charging them with one count of conspiracy to deal and possess counterfeit currency with intent to defraud, two counts of possession of counterfeit currency with intent to defraud (one against both defendants and the second naming only defendant Gober), and aiding and abetting. The indictment alleges that on or about April 2, 2009, the defendants conspired to sell $5,000 in counterfeit currency to a buyer in Bensalem Township, Pennsylvania, and that they collectively possessed a total of $2,000 in additional counterfeit currency at the time of their arrest.

If convicted, defendant Gober faces a total maximum sentence of 45 years imprisonment, a fine of $750,000, three years supervised release, and a special assessment of $300, and defendant Jackson faces a total maximum sentence of 25 years imprisonment, three years supervised release, a fine of $500,000, and a special assessment of $200.
